

Documented Deception of American Voters: A Record and a Proposal

September 2026 · Prepared by swampforce.com · Policy brief for lawmakers, staff, and legal groups

Summary. This brief is based on a documented record of 250 cases (142 from the first Trump term / 2017–January 2021 era; 108 from after the first term and the second term). A case is included only when the claim was later corrected, retracted, settled, shown false by an official finding, or rated False / Mostly False / Pants on Fire by a major fact-check. Full tables and sources: swampforce.com. Full evidence for every case, with links: see Evidence Appendix.

KEY NUMBERS FROM THE RECORD

Who pushed it (exclusive categories)		Most common deception methods
News outlet / journalist	79	Other	75
Politician / campaign	83	Fabrication / retracted invention	52
Both news and politician named	24	Omission / selective reporting	40
Viral / anonymous social media	25	Contextomy / misquote	26
Other / unclassified	39	Policy-scope inflation	23
Total	250	False photo/video / cheap fakes	12

Viral rows are tagged when no named outlet, journalist, or politician was the primary pusher.

Normalized to the site glossary. Counts use one primary mapped category per case.

Evidence audit: Proven false 178; Rated misleading 72. Proof basis — Official record 65; Outlet’s own correction 64; Original transcript/video 27; Fact-check only 94. Correction visibility — Never corrected (fact-checked only) 157; Appended correction 64; Editor’s note 8; Settlement/legal retraction 5; On-air 2; Unknown 14.

STRONGEST CASES (HARDEST EVIDENCE)

Limited to Proven false with Official record or Outlet’s own correction. Mix of both terms:

WHY CORRECTIONS DON’T FIX IT

Psychology research shows why a buried correction rarely undoes the first blast. The continued influence effect means people keep relying on retracted information (Johnson & Seifert, 1994; Lewandowsky et al., 2012). The illusory truth effect means repetition makes claims feel true even after a correction (Hasher, Goldstein & Toppino, 1977). False news also spreads faster: an MIT study found false stories were about 70% more likely to be retweeted and reached people roughly six times faster (Vosoughi, Roy & Aral, Science, 2018).

NEWSROOM LEAN (VERIFIED SURVEYS)

Indiana University American Journalist survey (2022): about 36% of U.S. journalists identified as Democrats and 3.4% as Republicans (~52% independents); Republicans were 7.1% in 2013. Center for Public Integrity (2016): more than 96% of itemized journalism-sector donations to Clinton or Trump went to Clinton. Harvard Shorenstein Center / Patterson (2017): of clearly toned coverage in Trump's first 100 days, 80% was negative (~13-to-1 on CNN and NBC).

CURRENT LAW

False political speech is largely protected under the First Amendment (United States v. Alvarez, 2012). Public-figure defamation requires "actual malice" (New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 1964). Narrower tools exist but are limited: the FCC's news distortion policy applies only to over-the-air broadcast licensees and needs extrinsic evidence of deliberate falsification; cable and digital outlets are outside it. FEC disclosure can reach paid opposition research—the FEC fined the Clinton campaign and DNC $113,000 in 2022 for misreporting Steele-dossier payments as legal expenses. Civil defamation still yields settlements (ABC/Stephanopoulos; Paramount/CBS in this record). Several states already regulate election deepfakes (Texas SB 751 (2019); Minnesota Stat. § 609.771 (2023)).

PROPOSALS FOR CONSIDERATION

Options within existing First Amendment doctrine—not viewpoint censorship. Priority is equal-prominence corrections: buried retractions are never seen.

- 1. Equal-prominence corrections (priority). A correction must match the original's placement and reach—same air slot or segment; top of the same page, feed, or account online. Continued influence (Johnson & Seifert, 1994) and faster false-news spread (Vosoughi et al., 2018) explain why buried notes fail. Build onto FCC news-distortion for broadcast; extend parallel rules to covered digital publishers without a fairness doctrine for opinion.
- 2. Accuracy standards for press credentials. Publish viewpoint-neutral standards under which a White House or congressional press credential may be reviewed for a documented pattern of false reporting that was never corrected—applied equally to all outlets, with notice and a chance to respond. Case law already requires process: Sherrill v. Knight (D.C. Cir. 1977) held that denial of White House access needs a published standard plus notice, opportunity to rebut, and a written decision; CNN v. Trump (D.D.C. 2018) restored Jim Acosta's hard pass by TRO for lack of due process; Karem v. Trump (D.C. Cir. 2020) affirmed an injunction against a 30-day suspension for want of fair notice. In AP v. Budowich (2025), the AP was barred over "Gulf of America"; the district court enjoined the exclusion, and the D.C. Circuit (June 2025) partially stayed that injunction (except as to the East Room). As of September 2026 the merits appeal remains pending after November 2025 argument. Site view: this list documents why such standards are needed.
- 3. Congress corrects its own record. Under each house's rulemaking power (Art. I, § 5), when a member's public statement is proven false, the member must formally correct it with the same prominence as the original, and a public registry records who corrected and who refused. This does not alter Speech or Debate immunity for legislative acts (Art. I, § 6).
- 4. Stronger FEC disclosure for opposition research. Clear labeling when campaign or party funds pay for research seeded to the press.
- 5. AI media transparency + public corrections registry. Federal labeling for knowingly distributed deceptive synthetic election media (with news/parody carve-outs), plus a searchable nonpartisan registry of material political corrections, retractions, and settlements. Stay inside actual malice: knowing falsity or reckless disregard—not good-faith error.

Site owner's view. Hannah Arendt warned that when people can no longer tell fact from fiction, they lose the capacity to think, judge, and act as citizens (Errera interview, NYRB 1978; Origins of Totalitarianism, 1951). Deliberate, large-scale deception of voters betrays informed consent in a self-governing republic. This record is offered as evidence for stronger accountability—not as a substitute for the Constitution.
